

Assignment 4 - morphology

Due April 29nd by 11:59pm

1. Develop the morphology Page
2. By this point, you should know what research is available for your language, how it is classified, the historical and typological issues, the phonological system and know at least a few languages that may be related.
3. Considering your language as a whole, are there any morphological features that are closely associated with your language or that seem to define or identify your language?

Morphology

1. Does your language have any characteristic features?
 - a. Non-concatenative morphology
 - i. Must discuss word formation - does your language make words in the way of Arabic? If so, explain the system. If not, you MUST say that it does NOT have non-concatenative morphology
 - b. Noun classes or gender?
 - i. Is it reconstructed?
 - ii. What is the agreement with respect to noun class and gender?
 - iii. Is there agreement throughout the sentence is there agreement only with respect to things that modify the noun? Some combination?
 - c. Agglutinating? Isolating?
 - i. What elements of a sentence can be combined to form a single word?
2. Have any of the extensions been reconstructed? Has anyone hypothesized a reason for this?
3. Are there any other morphological characteristics that are considered unique or "exotic" in your language?
4. Is there anything else of interest that you have found out about your language? Any features that are regularly talked about or discussed with respect to your language?

As always, be sure to email me a link to your website when you finish and cite your sources.